Science vs Bible

"Go therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son, and the Holy Spirit..." Matthew 28:19

Most mornings I make a cup of tea to take with me to drink on the way to work. Some days I run out of time, so I stop at Starbucks to pick up a cup of tea. One morning recently I went into Starbucks and ordered "the usual" (Venti Refresh). The total was two dollars. I handed the gal at the register a "million dollar bill tract" and asked her if she could make change. She looked at it and looked puzzled. Finally she asked me, "what is this?". I told her it is a Gospel tract while handing her a twenty so she could complete the transaction. I told her there was an interesting question for her on the back and asked her to take a look at it when she had a chance. There was no one else in line so I told her that the million dollar question was whether she would go to heaven when she dies. She immediately answered that she was raised in a Christian home but does not believe that any more. She said she believes in evolution now. I asked her if something had happened at church that caused her to no longer believe. She said she guessed it was just that she had spent more time in science class than in church! So I said, since you believe in evolution, can you tell me where the first living cell came from that Witnessing Tip: Do you want to share your faith, but are not sure how to get started? Go to www.livingwaters.com and order some Million Dollar Bill gospel tracts. Then when you go to pay a bill at a restaurant or store (or anywhere you are paying for something) hand them the tract for payment and ask if they can make change. They may look puzzled. Ask them to check out the million dollar question on the back after work!

we all evolved from? She said, "um, I'm not sure". I told her that is the same answer that most scientists who believe in evolution will give when asked this question. At some point they will all resolve to "perhaps", "I suppose", "maybe" or something similar. She said it is the same argument as where did God come from. However, it is not. The Bible clearly states that God is eternal. He has always existed! And he will always exist. Evolution can't make the same claim since it claims continual evolution. Following that backwards, you must eventually get to a single cell, which has to have come from someplace. Doesn't it make more sense that an all powerful, eternal God created life, then that everything just amazingly came from nothing? Her name is Angie. Please pray for her. While we are at it, let's pray for all of the children in our public school system that despite being taught the fairy tale of evolution in the classroom that they can know the truth about God!

In the last Bezeugen Blast I talked about witnessing to Bernice and Stanley the couple who had been married 64 years! On Wednesday I went back to the same mall and asked a man if I could join him at his table to eat lunch. He agreed. We had a nice conversation which I eventually turned to Spiritual things. He turns out to be a believer and we had a very nice conversation. Eventually he said, "didn't I see you a couple of days ago talking to an older couple at that table right there?" I told him about the witnessing encounter with Bernice and Stanley. It's a small world. And interesting to see that people notice what we are doing! I pray that other "eaves droppers" have heard the Gospel from us!
